

Middle Eastern, Jewish and Islamic Civilisations as a New Minor Subject Details for 25/26

Why take this New Minor Subject?

The Joint Honours degree course in Middle Eastern, Jewish and Islamic Civilisations gives students an analytical and well-rounded perspective on this hugely important, fascinating region and significant civilisations. Encompassing all aspects of Middle Eastern, Jewish and Islamic civilisations – from history, politics and religion to the arts, languages, and international relations – the degree course offers a broad education across the humanities and social sciences. Our modules provide a strong academic grounding in these civilisations from antiquity to the contemporary world, as well as addressing the latest critical approaches and changing landscapes. But it also develops students' cultural dexterity in a way that is important for the increasingly globalised job market, where one needs to be able to network as easily with someone in Dubai or Cairo as with someone in Cork or Donegal. The degree also provides critical skills in research and communication – again, highly valued attributes in the world of work.

If you are interested in ancient and modern history, in literature, in religion and philosophy, in the Middle East and its cultures and religions, in the region's relationship with the Western world, this course would be of great interest to you. If you find yourself asking how societies develop their values and perspectives, you will be able to explore how they do so over the course of some of the most exciting periods of human history

The course has huge contemporary relevance. We examine issues like gender, racism, Islamophobia, migration, antisemitism and the place of religion in secular societies and secular life in religious states.

A diverse department, we are committed to helping students pursue their intellectual interests and extend their intellectual skills. We aim to support them in achieving their study goals, in the belief that these provide a key foundation for subsequently achieving life goals. Our students come from many different cultural backgrounds, in Ireland and abroad, and our degree programmes presuppose no prior knowledge.

What will I learn?

In the first year of this New Minor Subject, students are introduced to a wide range of areas across the full spectrum of ancient and modern topics. In the following years students shape their own educational experience, by choosing modules in accordance with their own developing interests.

For those who enjoy studying languages, we offer a range of ancient and modern Middle Eastern languages. Those available typically include Arabic, Turkish, Hebrew (modern and ancient), Ottoman Turkish, and Middle Egyptian Hieroglyphs. Language study is optional and begins in year two.
